Welcome Message

¡Bienvenido a Albuquerque! To celebrate our 29th annual conference, we are pleased to return to Albuquerque, a city known for its hospitality, splendid landscapes, rich cultures, and generosity of spirit. With participants from across the country and around the world, we're excited about this year's presentations and wide-ranging methodologies. Since our founding by Dr. Peter C. Rollins in the 1970s to create a forum for the interdisciplinary study of the Southwestern region, we have grown to represent over 70+ areas of focus in the fields of popular and American culture.

Since our inception, the SW/TX PCA/ACA has aimed to promote an innovative and nontraditional academic movement in Humanities and Social Sciences. We desire to provide an outlet for scholars, writers, and others interested in popular culture and to share our ideas and papers in a professional atmosphere. A core value of the organization is the belief that understanding of national, or even global, concerns first begins with regional and local learning.

The SW/TX PCA/ACA enjoys an affiliation with the National Popular and American Culture Associations founded by Ray B. Browne and directed by John F. Bratzel. In the spirit of those dedicated individuals who helped to make our organization what it is today, I invite all of you to look at our impressive list of areas and to acknowledge all of those Area Chairs who have worked diligently to coordinate engaging panels with recognized experts and innovative thinkers. Our Area Chairs, all of whom lead demanding and interesting lives, work hard all year to make this conference a success. When you see our Area Chairs, take a moment to introduce yourself and thank them for their work.

In addition to our many conference offerings and special events to which you are all invited, we offer yearly numerous graduate student awards in the areas of Popular Culture, American Culture, Western Studies, European Popular Culture, Biography, Creative Writing, Texas Culture, Folklore, and Women in Popular Culture. We're pleased this year to offer again a special Albuquerque Convention and Visitors Bureau Award for Southwestern Culture with particular emphasis on food culture, Native American cultures of the region, Southwestern art, Southwestern-focused collections and collectibles, or Route 66. Please plan to attend our graduate student award recognition event to honor our graduate student winners and future leaders of our profession. We also like to thank here the Albuquerque Convention and Visitor's Bureau and the Charles Redd's Center for Western Studies for its generosity and support of our graduate students.

While you are here, please take advantage of the many cultural activities and dining opportunities Albuquerque has to offer. We feel certain you will come to understand as we do how the state of New Mexico is truly a Land of Enchantment. We hope everybody will enjoy the conference and our fine hotel host, learn much, and plan to return next year.

Phil Heldrich & Ken Dvorak

Thanks, Credits, and Kudos

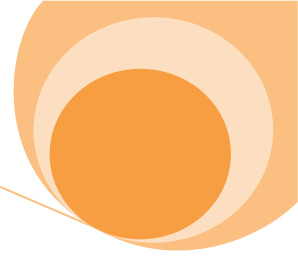

The work of organizing a conference requires the efforts of many people. The SW/TX PCA/ACA would like to give special thanks here to Sally Sanchez, Conference Coordinator. Sally labors tirelessly behind the scenes to make sure the planning goes smoothly at all levels. She responds year round to literally hundreds of queries and requests in what might be described as a veritable freshet of emails. She's also the creator of our program layout and our database. She diligently tracks Area Chair requests and presenter requests with expertise and patience. Her many talents and labors are very much appreciated.

We also thank Karen Dvorak who has given much of her time to the organization. You might recognize her from the conference registration table, but she works behind the scenes throughout the year with organizational planning and scheduling. Tilly Garcia-Slaten, who has volunteered her time to the organization for the past four years, also plays a crucial role in helping to make participant registration at the conference run smoothly and for choosing the art work that graces our official conference program. Thanks as well to Phil's mom, Connie, who has enjoyed lending a hand to the team. Special thanks goes to our expert Web Master, Lacy Landrum. She continues to volunteer her time maintaining our SW/TX web site (<http://www.h-net.org/~swpca>) and providing our world-wide audience with updated information about the SW/TX organization. A very large thank you goes to the Albuquerque, Hyatt Regency Hotel, whose professionalism and expert staff makes this event a truly outstanding conference for our presenters and guests.

We also want to thank those serving on the judging panel for the Peter C. Rollins Book Award—Hugh Foley, Delia C. Gillis, and Scott Zeman. Special distinction as well needs to go to those who have served as our Graduate Award judges—Phil Heldrich, Ken Dvorak, Rhonda Harris Taylor, Lynnea Chapman King, Jack Hutchens, J. Christoph Laucht, Tobias Hochscherf, Jill Patterson, Judith L. Carter, John Bratzel, Diana Cox, Mike Schoenecke, Dennis Cutchins, Kenneth W. Davis, Monica Ganas, Steve Davis, and Christopher Smith. This work takes time and is most appreciated.

Lastly, the organization would like to thank Phil Heldrich and Ken Dvorak for their exemplary work as Board Directors. They understand that organizing a yearly conference is not always easy work, but they continue to give of themselves and their time because they believe in the organization and what it accomplishes. Kudos to All!

Peter C. Rollins Annual Book Award for the Southwest/Texas Popular Culture and American Culture Associations

This prize is awarded annually to the 'best' book in popular culture studies and/or American culture studies. Preferred consideration will be given to books on the histories and cultures, including popular cultures, of the Southwest and the West. The SW/TX PCA/ACA also encourages submission by members of the organization. Prize-winning volumes receiving this award are distinguished by their methodology and research; monographs, reference works, and anthologies are eligible.

Designed to reward genuine research and lucid expression, the award bears the name of Peter C. Rollins, Co-Founder of the organizations. In reference works such as The Columbia Companion to American History on Film and anthologies such as Hollywood as Historian, he showcased the word of many members. Over a period of thirty years, he helped both junior and senior scholars to do their best work in his role as Associate Editor of the Journal of Popular Culture and the Journal of American Culture, as the former Director of the, Center for the Study of Film and History, and as Publisher of the journal, Film & History: An Interdisciplinary Journal of Film and Television Studies (see: filmandhistory.org)

Prize –winners are announced at the annual SW/TX Conference and presented with a plaque recognizing their achievement and scholarly contributions to the study of popular and American culture.

2006 AWARD WINNER

M. Elise Marubbio (Augsburg College), Killing the Indian Maiden: Images of Native American Women in Film, (University of Kentucky Press, 2006)

PREVIOUS WINNERS

Wheeler Winston Dixon (University of Nebraska), Lost in the Fifties: Recovering Phantom Hollywood, (Southern Illinois UP, 2005).

James M. Welsh (Salisbury University) for his career-long creativity in literature/film books and journals.

For additional information and submission guidelines for the 2008 Peter C. Rollins Book Award, contact Dr. Ken Dvorak, Chairperson, Rollins Book Award Committee at the conference or by email at kendvorak@comcast.net

248 Transgressive Cinema

The Sadist

Special showing of James Landis The Sadist (1963) 90min

12:45 – 2:15 p.m.

Fiesta 4

The Sadist features cult actor Arch Hall Jr. (Eegah!) as half of the homicidal couple. Along with his insane girlfriend, he makes his way across the country picking victims at random. Three people driving into Los Angeles for a Dodgers game have car trouble and pull off into an old service station and junkyard for repairs.

Unfortunately, this is also where Hall has decided to come off the road. This film was a major influence on Quentin Tarantino's script Oliver Stones 1994 film, Natural Born Killers; the similarities are uncanny. The Sadist is a key text in a modern folktale of a type only exceeded by the Manson murders. With striking cinematography, by Vilmos Zsigmonds, who would later win an Oscar for his camera work, The Sadist provides a glimpse at Transgressive Cinema in its most pure form.

Screening and Discussion with Filmmakers

Will Rogers' 1920s: A Cowboy's Guide to the Times
(1976, Ridgemont Media 41min)

4:15 – 5:45 p.m.
Enchantment A

This historical compilation film is a CINE Golden Eagle winner (the highest award for non-theatrical films) in which historian-filmmakers apply a scholarly method to recreating a turbulent time as seen by Oklahoma's cowboy savant. After screening the film, the filmmakers, Richard C. Raack (Cadre Films) and Peter C. Rollins (Ridgemont Media) will discuss their research and film methods, a discussion that will include stop-action analysis of film languages and commentary about the legitimate uses of film to "write history" with a caméra-stylo. Come meet two pioneers of the genre and learn from a youthful Will Rogers about the Jazz Age.

Nosferatu The Vampire: A Symphony of Horror

Chair: Robert Weiner, Mahon Library

5:45 – 7:15 p.m.
Enchantment F

Our silent film showing this year will be Nosferatu. Each year, at Southwest/Texas PCA, we try to show a silent film that has influenced the history of film or provide a unique glimpse into the use of silence as art in film context. This year's screening is the classic Nosferatu directed by the great F.W. Murnau and featuring Max Shreck as the vampire Count Orlock. This was a very "loosely" adapted version of the Bram Stoker novel Dracula. Nosferatu was almost destroyed by Stoker's widow because of copyright infringement, but this film has outlasted many others of the silent era. Although a number of prints were actually destroyed, thankfully there were enough prints floating around that we can see this classic today. Anyone interested in vampire and Gothic culture, the history of film, or horror in popular culture should come see this film.

Message from the Co-Founder

Peter Rollins

What Can Be Accomplished at a Professional Meeting?

Someone I know was disappointed by the attendance at his session in a recent, professional meeting—there were only fifteen people present—and shared his feelings with me. Although he was a senior scholar, it seemed to me that he had forgotten the variety of reasons why we attend national meetings and has remembered only the personal performance aspect of the event—only one of the facets of a rich three or four day experience.

My response to him was not as complete as it might have been, so here I share my thoughts on this matter after thirty-five years of attending and organizing regional and national meetings. Please share these reflections with your friends when they come back from a meeting a bit depressed.....Although drawn from PCA/ACA/AHA/OAH experience, these generalizations apply to all academic meetings where scholars gather to deliver papers, hear celebrity presentations, and spend time with colleagues. The following are things you can accomplish at a national meeting:

1. Give a paper.

The sessions can be crowded on some occasions and empty at others. There is no guarantee. But the preparation is a discipline in thinking and writing and creates a solid deadline for a synthesis of one's research, clearing your head and creating a platform for a new round of research and writing. Give a good talk and distribute a paper. DO NOT read your paper. Use the preparation as a discipline to bring your ideas to a commitment; audience numbers are irrelevant in terms of the progress of your research.

2. Place a publication.

Have a "perfect" copy of your paper ready to hand to an editor of one of the many magazines represented at the meeting. Having a paper in proper format really is a "dress for success" approach to the opportunity to publish and will impress the editor with your unusual professionalism. Because editors often lose documents, send along a copy by attachment after the event. (Redundancy is sometimes a virtue.)

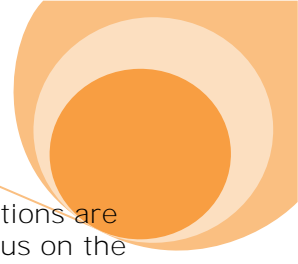

3. Make that connection.

People at the meeting are going to be interested in what you deem important for study. You can make invaluable connection with such soul mates at conferences in friendships that can last for decades. A senior scholar used to call this "making that connection." We now tend to call it "networking." Either way, it is heartening to know that others are interested in the same things you are, so take the time to meet new people and enlarge your circle of professional connections. With the Internet, it is now possible to share information and resources as never before and such exchanges can energize and inspire lonely scholars.

4. Learn about trends in the profession.

Every profession is a group of human beings. You need to see and hear what these fellow professionals think is important—even if you disagree. The cocktail parties and receptions are often the best places to pick up this informal information. Formal papers may not focus on the trendy aspects as much as hallway exchanges. You cannot pick up the hallway details unless you are at the meeting! How often have I wished that a young scholar had been present for the information exchanged informally between sessions by senior scholars, editors, and the “influentials” of the field. Don't miss this kind of information!

5. Learn about grants.

Every national meeting has one or two sessions devoted to grant writing. Attend these sessions and learn what might be fundable. This kind of grantsmanship is good for you and good for your school. It is almost impossible to get such information elsewhere, esp. because grants officers are constantly shifting from one endowment or funding agency to another. Remember that administrators often equate excellence with grants acquired; as a humanist, you should try to bring in at least one grant every three years.

6. Meet leaders in the field.

Shake Michael Schonecke's hand and thank the organizers, Ken Dvorak and Phil Heldrich. Meet the current and previous presidents of the organizations. These are people in a network of popular culture and American culture scholars, the people who set the tone and tenor of our field. Meet Norman Smith and share a laugh! There is no substitute for putting a face with a cluster of ideas. This exposure humanizes learning; it should make what you do a less lonely and cerebral task because you have met the people you are reading and you are writing for a truly identified audience rather than to a sea of anomie.

7. Have fun with friends.

Over the years, we can identify a constellation of friends and acquaintances who make up the popular culture and American culture movement. Some we admire, some we deplore, and some we wonder about, but all are part of our community of scholars and have interesting lives. All are good people who add to the legend and lore of our movement. For example, I always look for Cida Chase to congratulate her on bringing such interesting scholars from Latin America to the SWPCA meetings; she encourages them to deliver their presentations in Spanish, an option which makes our regional meeting unique.

8. Enjoy the region and place.

Meetings are held in different locations to help members tour the nation and develop ideas about the “progress” of our national life. Take time to gather impressions of the region and city of the conference, starting with a standard bus tour of the city. Talk with ordinary people on the street. Go to natural sites and visit local museums. Take advantage of the cuisine of the places we visit. This is a legitimate use of your travel time and funds and will influence your work as a popular culture scholar.

9. Learn how to publish.

Every national meeting has a “publish and flourish” session, and every young member should attend to hear about the priorities and policies of the magazines and journals that serve as for a for members of PCA/ACA. Editors often share “editorial calendars” of their journals, which inevitably include plans for issues focused on special topics; you may have a paper on such a subject or you may gain encouragement to write one with this special focus. (I have seen the latter option happen on more than one occasion.)

10. Discover what is available for teaching.

There are colleagues who are teaching films, books, or general topics which interest us. Here is a wonderful opportunity to meet such people and to learn from them. I “discovered” the film and history area of study and teaching in this way; nowadays, it is possible to go to the website of a professor to view the pertinent syllabus and course rationale, but such documents are not “alive” to us until after we have met the scholar who developed them.

11. Take advantage of the book display, which gives you an opportunity to do a variety of things:

- a. You have a chance to look at books in our field and to buy some, often at a cut-rate price because the presses do not like to ship remainders back to the home office.
- b. You get to meet the press reps who commission books. This is an invaluable opportunity. These are interesting people who love books and want to find new authors. (You may think that they are there to sell books, but they think they are there to meet writers with great projects in their minds and briefcases.)

12. Enjoy food and drink with friends at the receptions.

We all exist in individual departments. In the midst of life, we communicate over the internet with friends around the globe. The receptions give us a chance to let our hair down and to have some free flowing conversation with our friends, people with whom we have been communicating all year long. Cherish these moments of conviviality and take a moment to make a new friend or two—ironically, often someone in another department at your own school! On the other hand, do not “hang out” at reception with your colleagues from home; this strategy robs you of the rewards from such an event.

13. Conduct organizational business.

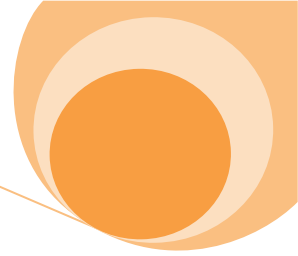

Regional officers and members can get together at meetings, using the time to plan regional activities and publications. Take advantage of these moments and plan ahead by scheduling a room for such meetings and placing the announcement in the official program.

You will note that your personal paper presentation was only one out of thirteen activities at the meeting. You cannot be blamed for attracting very few auditors when in competition with a number of other exciting sessions. However, you can share your ideas with others—including university press representatives—and benefit from the other twelve activities of professional importance at such a meeting. If just ONE of the other events goes well, you have justified the trip and the university/personal support!

Finally, numbers do not count. At a regional PCA/ACA meeting on the Oklahoma State University campus some years ago, I received a complaint from a speaker that only three people attended his session. I asked him who was there...His answer: “Ray Browne, Russel Nye, and Marshall Fishwick” (three of the five co-founders of the popular culture movement). My response: “You had an host present!” So do not count heads; count the fun and exposure and stimulation of the meeting, which includes friendship and the enjoyment of place.

See you at the next PCA/ACA meeting!

"Ogitchida Manitou" by Steve Hapy

The images inside the program are the work of Steve Hapy.

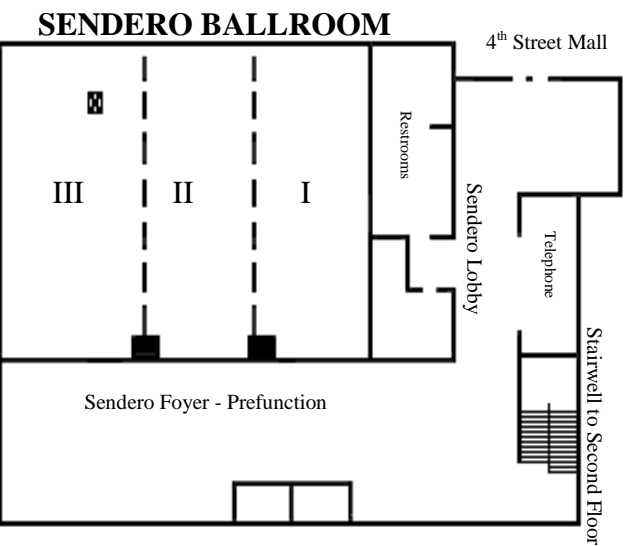

Artist Statement:

"I have been a lifelong resident of Tacoma, WA, and graduated from the Evergreen State College in Olympia. I am also a descendant of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe(Ojibwa). The philosophy and worldview of my Ojibwa ancestors has always been the most sensible and comforting for me... concepts such as respect, reciprocity, and recognition of nature's cyclic forces. Also the concept that humans are a part of the living world, not separated from "nature" and "the environment." While my artistic influences range through a wide variety of cultures and styles, the imagery in my paintings is mainly derived from Ojibwa cultural sources. Among these sources are pictographs and the more contemporary Woodland style of painting, such as the artwork of Norval Morrisseau. Among living Artists I would also want to include Rick Bartow (Yurok), and Gail Tremblay (Onandoga/Micmac) as having an enormous impact and influence on my work. While I am living within this ever-expanding, synthetic, fast-food culture, I have not abandoned my recognition of certain basic fundamental realities. By this, I refer to our human connection and dependence on the plant and animal worlds. I feel inclined to create images which reflect these connections... physical, mental, spiritual, and emotional. In part, I wish to communicate my desire that we redirect our human energies toward ecological balance, and not let our hubris continue to rule our actions."
